TECO announces the release of “Disaster Resistant Homes,” a 60-minute program prepared for the Public Broadcasting Network by the Information Television Network (iTV). TECO was one of four sponsors to make possible this exceptional program that brings awareness to the public of how to prepare your home for disasters before they hit. The program’s host takes viewers to various locations to interview homeowners who have or are in the process of disaster-proofing their homes. Experts from Universities and industry-related organizations present their views on earthquakes, fires, floods, hurricanes and tornadoes and identify protection options available to homeowners that are both practical and economically achievable.

The audience will get information on how to prepare for a natural disaster, choose materials for construction upgrades, learn what to look for in a new home and get educated on the insurance claims process following a disaster. Homeowners that have had success in their preparations will be featured.
